There are no ditches that cover the exterior boundaries of the lands embraced in Red. Hence the alternative methods of irrigation would be by flooding with the excessive overflow from the ditches and field above, or by subirrigation.

The former method occurs perhaps during the spring run-off. Tho' there are small spots of first class meadow grasses in the subdivisions marked 2nd Class Pasture which would indicate subirrigation.

The area within the boundary lines marked First Class Meadow is plainly watered by subirrigation, as there are a number of places where the water comes to the surface. And portions of this area would be called Marsh Lands.
