(20) Remarks

The water from Judd Canyon generally only runs in the Spring of the year. The flow rate varies depending on precipitation and snow melt rates. The entire flow is diverted and reaches the above referenced irrigated lands when available.

Water from Judd Canyon is commingled and supplemental with with other sources on the place of use, including multiple seeps and springs within the place of use. The above referenced Spring point of diversion represents one of the main spring complexes within the place of use. Spring flow and seeps have been declining since the onset of heavy development of groundwater rights in the basin. The entire flow of the appurtenant springs is diverted and used to irrigated lands, domestic use and water livestock when available.

The diversified pasture areas include Red Top Fescue, Timothy, and Johnson Grasses.

See supporting documentations supplied with this filing for additional information and historic uses.

The undersigned, being first duly sworn, deposes and says that the facts relative to the appropriation of water by Daniel S. Venturacci are full and correct to the best of his knowledge and belief.
