BIENNIAL REPORT OF STATE ENGINEER
1956–1958

RECOMMENDATIONS

Stream Gaging

It is recommended that an appropriation be made by the Legislature in an amount sufficient to carry on the State's share of the cooperative program.

Underground Water Hydrologist

It is recommended that this activity be directly incorporated into the Division of Water Resources and that the appropriation be made within the Division Budget and not as a separate budget item.

Elko District Office

It is recommended that an office of the Division of Water Resources be established in Elko, Nevada, and that the salary and expenses of the office be divided equally between state appropriation and water distribution funds. The creation of this branch office will give better service to the public and should result in an over-all saving in operation costs.

Personnel

The Division of Water Resources personnel should be reclassified and, where needed, legislation should be adopted placing the State Engineer, the Supervising Water Commissioner and his assistant in the classified service.

Legislation

Some minor amendments to the water laws may be desirable. Such legislation will be presented to the Legislature through the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources.

APPLICATIONS FOR WATER RIGHTS

During the 1956–1958 biennium, 620 applications to appropriate water were filed; 131 protests to the granting of permits were filed on 103 applications and 64 rulings were issued.

Office receipts during the 1956–1958 biennium were in the amount of $38,887.04. For comparison, the receipts for previous bienniums were 1954–1956, $53,443.19; 1952–1954, $54,927.14; 1950–1952, $46,947.13; 1948–1950, $39,002.

Action was taken on 1,500 applications during the 1956–1958 biennium. This represents action on 413 applications filed during this biennium, and 1,087 applications filed prior to July 1, 1956.

Of the 620 applications filed during this biennium, 360 were for irrigation purposes. The majority of these filings were to appropriate underground water for irrigation purposes on land applied for as desert land or homestead entries.

During the 1954–1956 biennium, 907 applications were filed for irrigation purposes, in comparison to 360 applications for irrigation purposes during this biennium. This is a considerable decline from the previous biennium, and is primarily due to a new policy by the Bureau of Land Management with regard to providing evidence of water rights under the Homestead and Desert Land Acts.

SUPERVISION OF DAMS

Prior to March 15, 1951, the water law of the State of Nevada provided no form of supervision on construction and control of dams in the State of Nevada.

The Legislature of 1951 vested the duty of such supervision of dams in the office of the State Engineer. The purpose of the Act is to safeguard life and property, and to further insure the most beneficial use of the water resources of the State.

NRS 535.010 to 535.120 lists the provisions and regulations of the Dam Act.

This office has received 39 applications for approval of plans and specifications for the construction, reconstruction or alteration of dams. Of the 39 applications filed, 14 were filed during the 1952–1954 biennium, 15 were filed during the 1954–1956 biennium, and 10 during the 1956–1958 biennium.

All of the applications filed during the 1956–1958 biennium are listed herewith.

The following is a condensed statement giving the data on applications filed prior to this biennium on which work has been done during this biennium and on applications filed during this biennium. The pertinent data is given in the order of:

1. Number and name of dam.

WATER DISTRIBUTION

HUMBOLDT WATER DISTRIBUTION DISTRICT

During both the 1957 and 1958 irrigation seasons, ample water supplies were available on all streams within the district. In some areas high water flows caused moderate to severe damage.

Quinn River

Periodic trips were made into the Quinn River area to regulate the water on both McDermitt Creek and East Fork Quinn River. The diversion structure on McDermitt Creek failed and temporary work was done at the diversion to regulate the flow. A new structure must be constructed this fall.

An attempt has been made to have all the water users enter into an agreement which would provide for the construction of the works necessary to properly regulate the stream system. To date no agreement has been entered into and it appears that court action will be necessary.

Little Humboldt River

High water in 1958 caused considerable damage on this stream system. The Corps of Engineers were contacted and considerable work was done by them in opening the Little Humboldt Channel through the "sand dune area." The work done by this agency prevented extreme damage in the lower valley.

Humboldt River

A great deal of work was done during the past two years to improve conditions on the Humboldt River system. Most of the work was done in the Battle Mountain area by the Pershing County Water Conservation District. The work consisted of building dikes and ditches, excavating the Iron Point Relief Canal and replacing the existing Slavin Dam with a reinforced concrete structure.

Several regulatory structures were constructed in the upper reaches of the Humboldt and many of the tributary stream channels were improved by the trapping of beaver and the removal of beaver dams.

There will be a substantial amount of water held over in Rye Patch Reservoir for use during the 1959 season.

PAHRANAGAT LAKES

In addition to the regular maintenance, considerable work has been done on the Pahranagat Lakes ditches and channels during the last biennium. A section of the channel on the Burns Ranch was cleaned for the first time in several years. A new structure was installed at the Hi-Line Ditch diversions, and the Anders-Higby Ditch was lowered and cleaned. The proposed project of lowering the outlet of the Ash Springs Pond in order to facilitate the cleaning of the spring area has not been completed, pending assistance from the Highway Department in lowering the culvert under the highway embankment. A continuous record of the daily flow in the main channel below Readers Lake has been kept since September 10, 1953.

CURRANT CREEK

There has been no regular water commissioner service on Currant Creek since the 1955 irrigation season. Mr. Donald Lanney has served as a part-time water commissioner during periods of low flow, but for the most part the water users have regulated their own water with satisfactory results. The 1958 irrigation season has been an exceptional season with regard to flow from this stream system.

DUCKWATER CREEK

Considerable work must be done on the Duckwater Creek system in the near future. All measuring devices and headgates are in good condition but the channel and tail ditch are in need of cleaning. The diversion structure on the tail ditch is in need of repair. A concentrated effort will be made at the end of this season to complete all necessary work on the stream system.

BAKER-LEHMAN CREEKS

High water is still causing considerable damage to the new Baker-Lehman Channel. During periods of high flow, water is being diverted in the old channel to prevent the washing of rock and gravel in the new channel. The flow of Baker-Lehman Creek during the 1958 irrigation season is one of the best on record and the water users have enjoyed a good irrigation season.

COOPERATIVE GROUND-WATER INVESTIGATIONS IN NEVADA

By Omar J. Loeltz, District Engineer, United States Geological Survey, Water Resources Division, Ground-Water Branch

The study of Nevada's ground-water resources by the U. S. Geological Survey in cooperation with the State Engineer during the biennium July 1, 1956, to June 30, 1958, was a continuation of the long-range program for evaluating the ground-water resources of the State which was begun in July 1945. The program included projects of mutual interest to the cooperating agencies and was financed by equal contributions from each. All investigations were under the technical supervision of the Geological Survey.

The scientific staff of the Survey consisted of three geologists, one of whom worked part time, and an engineer.

The principle detailed investigation was the supplemental study of the ground-water resources of Las Vegas Valley. A large amount of additional data that became available since State of Nevada Water Resources Bulletin No. 5 was published in 1945 was compiled and analyzed. A better understanding of the hydraulic characteristics of the artesian basin resulted from this study. The first draft of the report is in preparation. It is tentatively planned that the report will be published by the U. S. Geological Survey as a water-supply paper.

The study of the Quinn River Valley in Humboldt County was completed. The report giving the results of the study was released to the open file pending publication as State of Nevada Water Resources Bulletin No. 14. The report is almost ready for publication by the State Printing Office.

The study of Quinn River Valley showed that the average annual recharge is about 24,000 acre-feet. Most of it results from the infiltration of water from streams and from the deep percolation of excess irrigation water. The amount of ground water that can be developed perennially will depend largely on the amount of water, now being evaporated or transpired by phreatophytes, that can be diverted to wells. In the McDermitt area the potential development is about 2,000 acre-feet annually; in the Home Ranch area, about 8,000 acre-feet; and in the Orovada area, about 7,000 acre-feet. Most of the present pumpage is from wells in the Orovada area, where more than 6,000 acre-feet are withdrawn annually. Water levels have declined less than a foot a year as a result of pumping in the areas of larger withdrawals.

The field study of the ground-water resources of Crescent Valley, Eureka and Lander Counties, was completed. The manuscript was submitted for review at the end of the biennium.

The study of the Truckee Meadows area was reactivated. The inventory of the representative wells and springs in the area was nearly completed. Practically all the available geologic data, both published and unpublished, were studied and additional minor geologic observations were made. More than 45 samples of water were analyzed for chemical constituents and radioelements. The samples were obtained practically without cost to the cooperative program because it was possible to coordinate the needs of the cooperative study and the needs of the Geological Survey in its radioelement sampling program. Work on the Truckee Meadows study will continue into the next biennium because of the great amount of basic data to be compiled and analyzed and of the complex nature of the hydrology and geology of this important urban and agricultural area.

Other areas in which investigations were continued include: Dixie and Fairview Valleys, Churchill County; Boulder Valley and adjacent portion of Humboldt River Valley, Eureka County; Fernley-Wadsworth area, Lyon County; Amargosa Desert, Nye County; and Meadow Valley Wash, Lincoln and Clark Counties.

In addition to the area studies, the statewide network of observation wells was maintained. Water-level stages or artesian heads of 250 wells were measured periodically as a part of the program for maintaining a check on the status of ground-water levels in the State. As in past years, the artesian head in Las Vegas Valley continued to decline. The rate of decline in the Las Vegas area was between two and three feet annually. Pumpage figures indicate that the total discharge of artesian water in the basin was about 50,000 acre-feet annually, or about twice the annual recharge.

Artesian heads in Pahrump Valley, Clark and Nye Counties, also continued to decline, but the rate of decline in the more highly developed areas was less than two feet a year. Elsewhere in the State, water levels and artesian heads were near average stages or declined locally only a fraction of a foot as a result of withdrawals.

All measurements of water level or artesian head are available to the public. The records of measurements are kept in the "open file" at the Geological Survey's office at Carson City. Many also are listed in the various publications resulting from the cooperative program; and, through 1955, many are contained in the annual series of water-supply papers published by the Geological Survey entitled "Water Levels and Artesian Pressures in Wells in the Southwestern States and Hawaii." After 1955 the measurements will be published only every five years. The first publication containing measurements for Nevada will cover the period 1956 through 1960.

More than 200 inquiries about ground water in Nevada were received during the biennium. These inquiries came from individuals, industrial concerns, mining companies, municipalities, and governmental agencies. Some of the inquiries could be answered specifically, others in more general terms, and still others could not be answered for lack of data. Fortunately, the percentage of the latter is decreasing as a result of the continuing cooperative program.

The following reports are available to the public as a result of the cooperative program:

COOPERATIVE STREAM MEASUREMENT PROGRAM IN NEVADA

By C. H. Carstens, Engineer in Charge, Surface Water Branch, Water Resources Division, United States Geological Survey

The Water Resources Division of the Geological Survey is charged with the responsibility of appraising the water resources of the United States. To fulfill this responsibility, a systematic program for determining the location, quantity, and quality of our water resources is conducted throughout the nation. Much of the data collected are interpreted and evaluated by the Geological Survey in special studies and reports; the data are also used for research into problems connected with water. The program is of particular value to the State of Nevada for determining the amount and location of water available for development and use in the State.

The stream-measurement program in Nevada is primarily a cooperative one in which the Geological Survey operates stream-gaging stations with assistance provided by the State and many local organizations. The program is coordinated through the office of the Nevada State Engineer, Division of Water Resources, who enters into an agreement with the Geological Survey to provide financial cooperation for operating the network of gaging stations throughout the State. A similar program of interest to Nevada is conducted on Nevada-California interstate streams in California under a cooperative agreement with the California Department of Water Resources. Other federal agencies may provide financial assistance if the investigation is for their particular interest or benefit.

A number of stream-gaging stations in Nevada are maintained by the Geological Survey without assistance from other sources. Gaging stations operated entirely by the Survey are at selected locations where the hydrologic investigation is of primary interest to the Federal Government, such as, long-established stations where continuous records are needed to provide a base for study of trends in water supply and use.

Data on surface water supply are published in a series of annual reports entitled "Surface Water Supply of the United States." Records for streams in which Nevada has an interest are published in Part 9, Colorado River Basin; Part 10, The Great Basin, and Part 13, Snake River Basin, of that series.

In addition to the annual streamflow reports, the district office at Salt Lake City and the Carson City office have completed their part of the work on two special publications during the biennium. They are:

(1) Compilation of Records of Surface Waters of the United States through September 1950, Part 10, The Great Basin, is being prepared for publication as Water Supply Paper 1314. This report will summarize all the available records through September 1950 in a condensed form, with periods of missing record filled in, where feasible.

Summary History of Columbia Interstate Compact Negotiations

By H. Calvert Anderson, Executive Secretary
Columbia Interstate Compact Commission

The first recorded proposal for an Interstate Compact covering water resources development in the Columbia River Basin was made by Governor Oswald West, of Oregon, in 1911. No definite action was taken and the matter remained one of academic debate for a number of years. In 1925, Congress granted consent to the States of Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Washington to negotiate a compact covering the Columbia River but no action was taken.

Early in 1943, the governors of the Columbia River Basin States again urged consideration of an Interstate Compact, but action was delayed because of the pressures of World War II.

The first meeting in the present series of compact negotiations was held in Spokane, Washington, on July 10, 1950. Further meetings and negotiations resulted in the enactment by Congress of the Act of July 16, 1952 (66 Stat. 737) which granted consent to the States of Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Washington and Wyoming to negotiate a compact. A federal representative was named and negotiations began. The Consent Act was amended by the Act of July 14, 1954 (68 Stat. 468) to include Nevada and Utah in the negotiations.

After almost five years of negotiations, including extensive conferences with federal agencies in Washington, D. C. and public hearings in all states, negotiating commissioners signed a compact draft in Portland, Oregon, on January 15, 1955. This draft was immediately submitted to all seven state legislatures and was ratified by Idaho, Utah and Nevada.

Since the compact had not been ratified by the required number of states, the negotiating commission renewed its working arrangements following the close of the 1955 legislatures.

Another compact draft was signed by all states on December 4, 1956, in Spokane, Washington, and was submitted to the legislatures in 1957. This draft was not ratified by any state but all agreed to continue negotiation.

From the meeting of July 10, 1950 until June 30, 1958, the Columbia Interstate Compact Commission, the body negotiating the agreement, has held a total of 39 meetings, supplemented by a large number of additional sessions of executive and special committees. The Commission operates under an established set of rules and procedures and issues printed reports of its work yearly. The Commission established a headquarters office in Spokane, Washington, in October 1953, and has employed a full-time executive secretary since that time.

All operating expenses of the executive office are shared on a pro rata basis by the states. The states each pay the expenses of their own commissioners and the expenses of the federal representative are paid by the Federal Government.

Commissioners from the negotiating states are appointed in varying ways and for varying terms of office, according to the laws and regulations of the individual states. This has resulted in considerable change in personnel, particularly from the States of Oregon and Washington.
